#BlogConLDN

What could be better than a day trip to London? A day trip to London with my blogging pals to attend Scarlett London's #BlogConLDN, of course!

My alarm was set for 6am (earlier than my working week wake up call, eek!) and I spent the entire night tossing and turning paranoid I'd oversleep and miss my train. It was my first big blogging event in London, and I'd purchased my ticket waaaay back in September (even before #BloggerHalloweenParty!).

ABOUT ME

Blogging and Vlogging my way through my Disney life. 25 y/o University of Lincoln Alumni working in Digital Marketing, living in the West Mids.

I know these can normally be quite costly, so it was great to receive one to try for free. I look forward to seeing my results when I do give it a go. In amongst the goodie bag was also lots of food and drink goodies, including a protein chocolate bar, some powder, a Funkin cocktail mixer drink and an Aspire green tea drink. Included also was a can of Green Cola, but I couldn't resist drinking it when I arrived home. I had tried one at the event and I thought it was a brilliant dupe for the real thing. It tasted so good!

Included in the bags were also a number of general skin and haircare products. I am super excited to try the Exuvience products. They proved to be extremely popular on the day so by the time I got round to them they had unfortunately run out of a lot of products, but they took great care in finding out each persons skin type to match them with something.
